

ABSTRACT

A method in a distributed application environment is provided. The method includes, in a network, encapsulating data requests generated by an application in a first system, transferring the encapsulated data requests to a second system, executing the encapsulated data requests in the second system, and processing in the first system responses generated by the encapsulated data requests in the second system.

20354474.doc